

D.O. Valdepeñas

Viña Albali Gran Reserva de Familia

Inspired by the starry night sky, Félix Solís wanted to create a wine that reflected the joyful and lively spirit of the Spaniards. He named this wine Albali, after a star in the Wassermann constellation.

Viña Albali Gran Reserva de Familia is made from the finest grapes of our own vineyards. The grapes for this limited edition are harvested at night to avoid higher temperatures.

Regionen

The name Valdepeñas comes from the eponymous city of antiquity, located in a sun-drenched valley with small rock formations – Val de peñas (Valley of the Rocks). Located south of Castile-La Mancha in central Spain, this region is almost completely surrounded by the production areas of the denomination of origin La Mancha D.O. and borders the south with Andalusia. The climate is dominated by extremes, with temperatures up to 40°C in summer and down to -10°C in winter. The future of this denomination of origin lies in the hands of the red wines made from Tempranillo grapes, which are well suited for aging, with excellent Crianzas, Reservas and Gran Reservas.

Verkostungsnotizen

This wine has a remarkable complexity, thanks to its long aging, with light aromas of leather, chocolate and spices. On the palate, it has a perfect balance of tannins, which is ideal for aging. The taste reminds of rich and ripe red fruits (cranberry and raspberry), vanilla and oak. It is a powerful and very flavorful wine, with a pleasant bouquet and long finish.

Speiseempfehlung

Suits very well with red meat, braising, wild and mature cheese.

Technische Information

Harvested in mid-September, at night, by hand, when the grapes have reached their optimal condition. The typical characteristics of the Tempranillo and Cabernet Sauvignon grapes are unfolded during the fermentation and aging process. Depending on the vintage, the wine is aged in American oak barrels for at least 24 months on average. The aging is completed in the bottle.
